New product launch at Expo West 2009

Otis McAllister, Inc. was pleased to close the fiscal year with record sales. All divisions – rice, canned goods, La Sirena, Latin America and military – experienced strong sales growth and early indicators predict another good year in 2009, despite the decline in the global economy. The company is well-positioned with a diverse product line aimed towards the value-conscious consumer and believes that its specialization in basic food items has allowed and will allow for continued prosperity.

New Distribution in New England

We are pleased to announce that BJ's Wholesale Club, Inc is a new major customer for our Super Lucky Elephant™ Jasmine rice. BJ's Wholesale is the 3rd largest membership warehouse club in the United States and the number one membership warehouse in the New England region.

While other larger club chains concentrate on building a clientele of small businesses, one advantage of selling Super Lucky Elephant™ to BJ's is that BJ's targets retail customers, therein building a broader client base and creating a stronger brand image.

Available in 5-, 25-, and 50-pound bags, our line of Super Lucky Elephant™ is a naturally fragrant, sweet rice that is imported from Thailand. Officially known as Thai Hom Mali rice, it is tested for purity throughout the milling process and carries the green seal of the Department of Foreign Service, designating that the rice is of the highest quality allowed to export by the Thai government.

OTIS McALLISTER IN THE COMMUNITY

Otis McAllister was pleased to welcome Harvard PhD professor Augustine Brown to our San Francisco office in early February to allow him access to historic records of the coffee trade in San Francisco during the early 19th century.

Otis McAllister, Inc has been able to keep a well-maintained and thorough set of records of the export business conducted by the company, dating back to the 1890's.

After conducting countless hours of research at the Smithsonian, the Ronald Reagan Library, and several other prestigious museums and libraries, Augustine observed that the records kept by Otis McAllister were the most complete and well-preserved set of business records he had been able to find, at both a private company as well as libraries and institutions.

NATURAL PRODUCTS EXPO WEST 2009

Village Harvest presented its lines of imported rice and frozen whole grains at the Natural Products Expo West Show in Anaheim, California, March 6th through 8th. Over 53,000 industry professionals attended the show this year, and increase from the previous year in spite of the sluggish economy.

As the first official launch of the line of frozen whole grains, attendees were impressed by the quality and versatility of the product. A product which is brand new to both the supermarket and food service industries, show goers enjoyed delicious recipes prepared by our very own in-house chef.
